About the Bootcamp

The Harvard Leadership Bootcamp has one main aim - to transform the idea of leadership from a one-sided theoretical lecture into a fun, collaborative and empathetic life skill.

Presented by The Leadership Institute at Harvard College, the 2-day offline conference is taught by current students of Harvard University - all of whom are thoroughly trained and have garnered immense experience with leadership at a young age. They create an open-minded and relatable atmosphere, where our students are not dictated, but actively participate in the process to define what leadership means.

Our students leave the Bootcamp as empathetic individuals who can gauge people, confident communicators both on the stage and in conversations, and problem-solvers that can find a way out of any challenge. The program ultimately prepares them to lead the crowd in the right direction, be it in school, college, career, or general life.
